Holiday without Panties

by Victor Ströbeck

We stopped for two days at Brussels and almost stayed there for one more day. The reason was that Lena made a conquest.

It happened on a Sunday when we were strolling down the streets, having left the car at the hotel.

Lena was complaining that her feet were sore.

"I wish I'd bought those Bally shoes I saw in Copenhagen," she said. "The heels on these sandals are too low. I feel much more comfortable in high heels."

At that moment I caught sight of a shoe shop in the Rue Max Albert ... and there was a light on in the shop.

"Perhaps it's open," I said. "Let's go and see. We can't have you walking about in shoes that hurt you."

We were lucky. When I knocked, a young woman came rushing to let us in. Apparently she could see that we were tourists because she spoke to us in English right away. I explained to her what we wanted.

While Lena sat down in a chair, mademoiselle Yvette fetched some boxes. She sat down on a low stool before Lena and while they were trying and discussing the shoes, I took a closer look at the young proprietor. The legend on the window said "Chaussures d'Yvette" and she had affirmed that she was Yvette.

A slim, dark-haired and shingled girl of twenty-five, at the most, with piquant looks. A sharp contrast to Lena, I thought. The two of them naked in a bed! Well, one's imagination is easily stimulated after a good night's sleep and an excellent dinner when you have as hot and juicy a piece of goods as Lena for your bedmate.

Suddenly I spotted something that gave me the definite idea that mademoiselle wasn't quite indifferent to her own sex: a small piece of mirror had been fitted into the foot rest of the stool.
